JOHN GREENWOOD enlisted at the age of 26 at Colchester in Sept. '62 and became a member of Company D. He was one of the most quiet men in the Company. There were times when there was considerable confusion, noise, loud talk and some fighting in the Company, but Greenwood was never a participant, sometimes in the dead hour of night, when a turmoil began and the Captain appeared with the query, "Who is making all the racket?" a dozen voices would reply much to the surprise of both parties "Greenwood." He was a model soldier served his time and was discharged with the regiment. He visits Vermont to attend the reunions of the regimental association, and is a prosperous farmer at Saranac, N. Y.
